T is generally conceded that this Medicine has effected more cures than any seven remedies ever presented to the public. It has probably cured more cases of Piles, Rheumatism, Sore Eyes, Burns, Tumors, Salt Rheum, Quincy, Sore Throat, &c., than all the popular medicines in use; and I am positive in Liver Complaint, Scrofula, Asthma, Coughs, Consumptions, Spinal Diseases, Worms, Broken or Sore Breasts, Headache and the like, nothing can be found with physicians or druggists that is so good, and the cure so quick. In all complaints peculiar to females especially, its efficacy appears al most miraculeus.

BALTIMORE CONVENTION, -That body will have a most responsible duty to perform to their pary and their country. The more so, as the pro bility now is that their nominations, if wisely made, will be confirmed next November by a grant. majority of the electoral votes of these States.

The first question is, Is the nominee compe tent to the high station? and next, Is he available? There are several spoken of highly competent, of well-known, sound political views, and perfection of mankind, and recognize but all are not alike acceptable to the true democrats of the nation.

One consideration should be borne in mind, and that is, to be sure in the nomination to secure the old reliable democratic States. We sen, or have been compelled to live. Your resthe States, and some flatter themselves that the tion or necessity.

I had the honor to prepare those resolutions; I trus much confidence is often the forerunner of de. They meet my deliberate approbation; I trus feat, and care should be taken that it does not happen with the democratic party in 1852 .- Among governments of either form, as among en, in our humble judgment, may find them-

A few States, we believe, have changed parties permanently, perhaps, if no error is made in a presidential nomhaps, if no error is made in a presidential nom-ination; but most of them lately democratic vor of a system and orders in the State which jectionable to them. Accommodate tried friends first, and we shall have all the better chance with the doubtful.

Even the whigs will admit that the prospect of the next presidential election is with the them would change the constitution, and Eng democratic party, but we shall be mistaken if land would be a limited monarchy no longer the race is to be so easily won.

The whig party are in a woful minority, ap-parently, just now, but they are for from heiror parently, just now, but they are far from being in professions just as strongly as his opponent.

His friends will make all kinds of promises and assurances. Let him be nominated, and the heats plate of some will be quickly swellowed. hasty plate of soup will be quickly swallowed, his native American letter will enhance his prospects in some important localities, and a prospects in some important localities, and a before constitution and change her form of governments. host of whig editors and orators will take care her constitution and change her form of gov of his rear. Louisville, Jan. 15, 1852. Messrs. Harney & Hughes: At the instance friends, and because parts of my speech to the meeting at the court house, on Saturday night, to request the President of the United States to ask the Queen of England to pardon Smith O'Brien and his associates, exiled for the part they took in the late popular outbreak in Ireland, have been understood by persons present differe at from what I intended, I have concluded to ask the Louisville press that published the resolutions, also to print my remarks; and as I hand you the manuscript, the other papers will oblige me by copying from yours.

Your fellow-citizen, W. S. PILCHER.

Mr. Chairman and Fellow-Citizens: We have assembled to express sympathy for Smith O'Brien and his associate sufferers in the late rebellion in Ireland, and to consider the mode in which we can make it useful to them. In doing so, the spirit of the resolutions on your table shall gnide me. They declare plainly the rights and duties of individuals and nation respectively, one to the other; and while they select our government as the medium of our re quests, they compromit no right of England, no dignity of the United States. This is not so in England or in Ireland; there, as said This is not so in England or in Ireland; there, as said before, they are monopolised by the landlords, who prop the government; out of this monopoly grows the woes of Irish men, aggravated there by the absence landlords, who draw resources from Ireland to squander on the continent of Europe. I thank Mr. Wolfe for his happy allusion to this seurce of Irish wee. Here he touched the nerve of her matady. The eloquent remarks of Mr. Pope are to the same point. The land system of Ireland, as in Ireland, appear wealth and splendor on the one hand, and poverty and rags on the other. So extreme is the wretchedness of the laboring poor in the metropolis of the empire itself, that rags, nakedness, and shame have denied the blessings of education and religion to their children, who have, in the midst of schools and churches, grown up moral barbarians and graceless heathen.

their children, who have, in the midst of schools and churches, grown up moral barbarians and graceless heathen.

The difference between civilization and barbarism, is the means of existence. To the starving man to preach morals and religion is vain; hunger makes him savage; feed him, give him sheiter, a good fire, and he is comfortable—he is civilized; a child may talk to him. The perfectability of man in his moral, intellectual, and physical being, consists in his growth; in each he begus in infancy, and attains to manhood. So with liberty, along with its possession must go the ability to enjoy it. Possessed of pienty, the diseased cannot enjoy the daintiest food.

The French revo ution affords to the world an example of liberty possessed, but not enjoyed. The mind of man must be schooled to liberty, as to arts and sciences. Reised serfs, as in Russia, liberty is not understood, and savery is preferred; and there, from the throne to the serf, master and slave succeed each other, like cause and effect, until the service condition constitutes the security of the throne, and the protection of the subject. Any f the throne, and the protection of the subject. Any overament, however useful its form to surrounding ations, if it feed one portion of its people by starving nother, to the starving, in effect, it is a despotism.

Very recently, schools have been opened for the poor and the ragged, in which thousands of aduits of both exes, as well as children, are crowded, of whom, an ateligent g intleman, lately in Engrand at the world's air informs me, not one has on a whole garment, all reliterally in rags. In Ireland, agriculture is taxed with so many charges by all orders of the State, and so lootly paid, that starvation, common to the idle and the aborious, crives the neonle from the soil to be wander. First at home, or emigrants abroad. The monopoly of abor. A fair exchange of the one for the other cannot be stained, so long as labor is separated from the soil, he source of natural supply for hunger and nakedness. Without access to the soil, capital can reduce the labor to the starving point. Monopoly of the lands into the wands of the lords of the Church and State, cuts off that ceessy and the laborer is reduced, in Great Britain and reland, to choose between starvation and servitude.

England has long perceived this state of things, and nable to change it without a subversion of her moreothy, she has exerted herself to obviate it by obtaining out from archy, she has exerted herself to obviate it by obtaining food from foreign countries to supply the deficiency of her own lands. For this purpose she has encouraged her people to embark in manufactories to trade for food, and induced others to enter into navigation and commerce to carry on that trade. In this way she has greatly relieved the sufferings of her poor, but she has not removed them. Still, those who make stockings wear none, and those whose labor loads the tables of the rich with plenty, go supperless to bed.

We deeply spmpathise with these people—would relieve them if we could; and perhaps the best aid we could extend to the needy in England and in Ireland, would be to equip ships to transport them to the rich than her own natural subjects; she quarters armies upon them; she sets spies upon their intercourse; she institutes a rigit police among them; her penal laws are severe, and her punishments, in many cases, disproportioned to the offence. She has made their religion a trime; she has proscribed it from the land, and made paupers of the native clergy; she has instituted a religion amongst them protesting against their own—charges them with heavy taxes for its support, and inflicts punismment for refusal. Her rule of Ireland is one of terror.

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON:

[Correspondence of the Louisville Democrat.] WASHINGTON, Jan. 11, 1852.

Every week now begins to tell, on the selection of candidates for the Presidency, and develops new schemes on both sides, to defeat the will of the people, by substituting for it the will of politicians.

Among the Whigs, there is the greatest ma nœuvre to get Webster fairly launched; but it is all in vain. The re-election of Gov. Boutwell, in Massachusetts, plainly shows that Mr. Weester cannot carry his own State, without the aid of a certain class of monied men whom he has offended, and that, like many great men, he will be obliged to leave the appreciation of his merits to posterity.

As for Mr. Fillmore he has evinced on several ccasions, a disposition to withdraw his name from the list of candidates, but was always pre vented from doing so, by two members of his cabinet who have themselves nlterior views .-He will no doubt decline, when there will be but very little seif-denial in doing so.

EDW. J. MARTIN & CO. ROOFING! ROOFING! (Successor of S. M. & C. M. Warren,)

we have in view. Mr. President, I intended to say some thing upon this subject, and I may as well say it now upon the question before the Senate. This discussion has taken a very wide range—a very discursive range. I shall not follow it in its ramifications, but there are some observations which I wish briefly to offer to the Senate.

Now, with respect to the invitation from Congress to Kossuth, I am not going to enter into any critical annalysis of it I am not going to enter into any philological examination of its words. It is idle to say that we invited him as an ordinary emigrant, to come here to enter his one hundred and sixty acres of land and to take up his residence in the forest.

To be sure, the word "emigrants" is used in the original resolution, but our attention was fixed upon the leader and his patriotic band, not because we sought them for the usual purposes of emigration, but because he had been an apostle and had become a martyr of liberty, and we desired to honor the cause and to honor the man; and we are truly anxious to rescue all these interesting sufferers from the evils of captivity, and the still greater evils impending over them, should Mohammedan hospitality be compelled to yield to Christian menaces. We invited the great leader of a great revolution to come among us; one who had performed CORNER OF FIFTH AND MAIN STREETS. a noble part in the history of his country -in the history, indeed, of the human race. It was an imposing procedure on our part. It was, and was intended to be, a testimonial from the Congress of the United States to a great man and a holy cause. Why, it went forth to the world as a homage from a great republic to a principle which is the corner-stone of its own institutions, and was announced in every journal from California to Siberia, whereever an iron despotism has not placed its foot upon the press. It was a most imposing legislative act. The arrival of the vessel we sent on this grateful mission upon the old Homeric waters of the Hellespont was heralded by the announcement of the fact to all the world. And a proud day it was for us, and I trust for human liberty. when these hope-deferred exiles trod the deck of freedom, and found the ensign of a great and free people waving over them. Then, and not till then, were they safe.

And are we now to mar this beautiful page of our history, this tribute to patriotsm and freedom, by saying that we merely invited a party of unfortunate Hungarians, as "emigrants," to our shores, and there they have landed, and there we leave them? They came as emigrants, and let them settle as such. And do we seek to prove by a philological examination of the invimerely, in fact, it would appear, to please two despotic monarchs-that we meant no honor to Kossuth, none to his companions, none to the cause to which they have devoted themselves? Why. sir, the common instincts of every man revolt against such a perversion. He came under no such circumstances. He came an exile, indeed, but admired and revered wherever liberty has found an abidingplace, or wherever sincere but secret aspirations acend to Heaven for its enjoyment. Such were the condition and claims M.B. BRADY......D. H. DAVIES of Kossuth. I regretted very much to hear upon this floor words of reproach, both against him and the revolution of his country. He needs no eulogy from me. He will WHOLESALE GROCERS, & DEALERS find that in the hearts of mankind and in the voice of history. His name will go down to posterity, imprinting his character and principles upon the generation among which his great deeds have been done Every age of the world is marked by the advent of peculiar individuals, who seem designed by Providence to perform a distinguished part in the concerns of the world. This age is marked by the deeds of Kossuth. Why, sir, there must be some great fascination about this wanderer, without power, without wealth, without a country. Such processions as those that have welcomed his arrival both here and in England have scarcely been seen in the world since the pageants of Roman triumphs. No man can receive such volunpossessing some of the highest quantues of our nature. Did he not, his presence would soon dissolve the enchantment, and reduce him to his true dimensions. But enthusiasm seems to increase as he becames better known, and all join in tenchantment tenchantment in the common in tenchantment in the common in the common in tenchantment in the common in the tary homage from a free people without

A good deal has been said about the revolution of Hungary, and a good deal in disparagement of it. I shall not follow these assaults to repel them. It would be a share Pins for Miniatures; Gold Pincils; Lockets; Rings; Bracelets; Bracelet (lasps; Bracelet (lasps; Bracelet)). these assaults to repel them. It would be a work of supererogation in this country.

will say, however, that it was a great and noble effort, worthy of the descendants of that band of heroes, who, centuries ago. that band of heroes, who, centuries ago, upon the frontier of Chrisdendom, upheld the banner of the Cross against the standard of the Prophet of Mecca. It is objected here that the Hungarians began their largest and best assortments of Mattresses and Furnishings for Steamboats in the West. upon the frontier of Chrisdendom, upheld revolution with professions of loyalty to the Austrian crown and of attachment to the Austrian empire; that they asked but little at first, and that they avowed their determination not to be separated from their common country; and all this is brought forward here as a charge and a proof of inconsistency and insincerity. Well, sir, this is almost a chapter taken out of our own revolutionary history-almost a narrative of events and feelings in our own country, connected with the oriour own country, connected with the origin and progress of our struggle with England. The resemblance, not to say the identity, is remarkable. What did our revolutionary fathers do? They, too, began with declarations of attachment to the English crown and people, and it is a historical truth beyond contradiction, that they did not desire separation, and they at first condemned it as a great evil.
